Largest Number Rural Phones In History Now Serving Cameron Area

More farmers now have rural telephone service in the Cameron trade area than at any time in history, according to C. L. Carson, local manager for the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

A total of 324 farmers in the Cameron area now enjoy rural telephone service as a result of the telephone company's steady progress in its postwar rural program to bring dependable, all-weather service to farmers. This means that more than 320 times as many farmers are now connected to the nation's vast communications network than at the end of World War II when the company had only 1 rural telephone in operation around Cameron, Carson said.

"The increase in farm telephones has brought not only better service to farmers but increased benefits to every telephone user in Cameron since more rural telephones mean a larger calling area open to each subscriber," the local manager said. "In addition, it increases business for Cameron merchants by broadening their trade area."

Rev. John Solomon, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Cameron, pronounced the benediction.

Thanks Expressed By County Health Unit For TB Unit Help

By Dr. E. S. Freeman

We of the Milam County Health Unit want to take this means to express our sincere and profound thanks to the public as a whole for their marvelous cooperation in making our 5th annual TB Chest X-ray survey a success.

Especially are we grateful to Hinton H. Pruett who has served as county chairman for the past three years. It is to the untiring efforts of him and his office staff as well as his appointed committees that we give credit for securing the 5392 X-rays made by the mobile unit in Milam county this year.

With equal satisfaction we thank the local chairmen—Cecil Criswell of Buckholts, L. G. Smith of Cameron, W. T. Pearson Jr. of Rock-dale, and Roy Butler of Thorndale. These gentlemen are to be commended on the manifestation of interest in the health of their county.

To the Chambers of Commerce in Rockdale and Cameron: We want to praise you for your services offered as county-wide co-sponsors of the program.

Also, to the volunteer workers, collectively and individually, we express our sincere thanks.

Our thanks are also due to those who generously allowed us to set up the X-ray equipment in their buildings, Hefley-Stedman Motor Company in Cameron, Joe Zalesky in Buckholts, W. T. Pearson and Sons in Rockdale, and G. W. Garner in Thorndale.

We truly appreciate the assistance of the Texas Power & Light Company in hooking up the equipment.

We would like to commend Mr. and Mrs. Carl McElroy, X-ray technicians, TB Division State Health Department, for the courtesy they extended to the public.

As for the newspapers, we could not have done without the publicity they so willingly managed for us.

Time alone is responsible for the fact that we missed the set goal of 6,000 X-rays by only 2.6%. In 1952 12 days of X-ray service were offered compared to the seven days allotted us in 1953. Despite all this there were 112 more X-rays taken this year—this due to the improvement in organization over the preceding year.

Chamber Poultry Committee Says Egg Factory Would Work Here

This is one in a series of articles supplied by the poultry committee of the Cameron Chamber of Commerce explaining an industry which had very little exploitation in the South. It pertains to keeping hens in cages throughout their productive lifetime and keeping complete laying records. These articles are taken from a pamphlet published by one of the larger feed manufacturers of the country.

Right from the start, let us make it clear that hens in cages offer a business opportunity for folks in the South. Many people have in the past thought of egg production as a few hens on a farm or in the back yard. Cage operations do not fall into this class. If you are interested in a family enterprise or a business investment that has real profit opportunities, consider these points:

Hens in cages are clean, pleasant factories, where hens do most of the work. Each bird spends her life in a separate cage. Feeding and egg collecting are easily done. There is very little heavy or disagreeable work.

Professors D. F. King and John Goodman at Alabama Polytechnic Institute report that a cage operation should return about $4.00 to $5.00 per cage for your labor. This is above all operating expenses at 1952 prices. Thus, a well-run egg factory with 2,000 cages should make $8,000 at 1952 prices. While this profit might decline somewhat in future years, the outlook is bright for better income for most other businesses with so low an investment.

Cost figures gathered by Purina and other studies made by Alabama Polytechnic Institute show that the cost of getting started is about $5.50 per cage. This includes all cost of housing, feed and the birds themselves up until they start to lay. It does not include the operator's own work nor the cost of land. The expense will be spread over a 6-month period.

Most operators will want to start with 1,000 cages. They can figure a total investment of $5,500 before their factory starts to produce. At present prices, the total investment should be paid off in slightly over one year's operation. The owner then can use part of his profits to expand.

Other egg factory owners will want to start with a 2,000-hen operation. They should figure on $11,000 capital, but should pay it off in a little over one year.

Some folks are starting 500-cage units as a sideline to farming or work in town. Some retired people also start with a 500-cage operation.

They can add other 500-cage houses up to a total of 2,000. This is the ideal size for most family-operated egg factories.

A big advantage in getting started now is that the investment can be paid off so rapidly. Should profits decline somewhat later on, it would take more months to pay back original cost.

A ready market for eggs at good prices. The South needs 25,000,000 additional hens just to supply the eggs which now are being shipped in. Prices paid to farmers in the South for plain barnyard eggs average 10c to 15c a dozen above prices received in the Midwest. Cage eggs are unusually clean and attractive. Most operators will find a ready demand for eggs at or above this profitable price.

A good, early start so important to young cotton plants can be handicapped by lygus, stink bug, thrips, and other early-season insects. It is important, therefore, to get them under control with dieldrin as soon as they make their first appearance.

Dieldrin kills early-season insects

Start the season right... start with dieldrin for economical, effective insect control. Lygus bug, stink bug, thrips, cutworm and leafhopper simply cannot survive around dieldrin. Neither can fleahoppers or grasshoppers.

Dieldrin is easily applied in spray or dust form and it is particularly suited to airplane application. Just a few ounces of actual dieldrin per acre, in the spray or dust mix, give a high-kill job... and such small amounts mean economy. Depend on dieldrin for low, low cost.

This season don't let early-season pests get a foothold on your cotton. See your insecticide dealer and plan to treat with dieldrin early... for healthy, top-quality cotton.

What's more, my clothes are cleaner, fresher, and dry ever so quickly in the automatic dryer. Yes, I'm singing even with the rain because good weather or not, I still get sunny day laundry with my automatic home laundry. What's more, washing's no longer a chore. I just load the machine, set it, and forget it! Any wonder then, that instead of washday blues, I sing "hallelujah" for my wonderful home laundry!

THE LITTLE RIVER PHILOSOPHER SAYS TELEVISION WON'T NEARLY REACH SOME OF THE CLAIMS MADE FOR IT

Editor's note: The Little River Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm at Marlow is good at talking about something he doesn't know anything about, as his letter this week probably reveals.

Dear editor:

I was readin in a newspaper last night where an educator in New York claims television is gonna cut down on child delinquency.

Accordin to him, television is gonna keep children at home and off the streets at night, and thus it's gonna be a big factor in improvin the morals of children. The delinquent child problem, he says, is gettin worse and television may be the answer.

I don't agree with him. In the first place, I don't think child delinquency is gettin any worse. I don't know who got the world in the mess it's in now, but I know it wasn't the children and they'll have to get mighty bad before they can equal their elders' record in that department.

In the second place, while television may cut down on movie attendance and book readin, I don't believe it'll have much effect one way or the other on child delinquency.

I know television hasn't been in use very long yet, but in another ten years I predict there will be about as much delinquency from homes with two television sets as homes with none. Education for example is supposed to cut down on delinquency, but you'd be surprised at how many educated people are in the penitentiary. Underprivileged children are pretty good prospects for delinquency, but frequently over-privileged children wind up in the same category.

I haven't been able to detect any effect the elimination of the well with a rope and bucket and the substitution of the electric pressure pump has had on child delinquency in the country or how purifying the water has on children in town, and neither has the introduction of radio. It'll be the same story with television.

The introduction of gadgets just never has had much effect on people. I remember when radio first came in and everybody was saying how much effect it was gonna have on politics, that everybody could now listen to the candidates and get a better size-up of the men, but it didn't work out that way. Congress is no better or no worse today than it was before radio, and I don't believe television is gonna do any better. I look for Congress and child delinquency to be about the same, with or without television.

They told me when the tractor was first introduced that it would practically eliminate physical labor on the farm. It didn't. The linotype was supposed to improve newspapers, too. I've probably drawn this parallel out too far now.

Yours faithfully,

J. A.

Presbyterian Church
In U. S. Makes Relief
Appeal Easter Sunday

The congregations of First Presbyterian Church in Cameron and in hundreds of other cities and towns in the Southland will respond on Easter Sunday, April 5, to the appeal of their denomination for funds for overseas relief and interchurch aid, Rev. John Solomon, pastor said.

Basic programs of this nature for 1953, to be supported mainly through the Easter offering, will require a total of approximately $175,000, it was said in Nashville, Tenn., by the Reverend Paul B. Freeland, secretary of the Department of Overseas Relief and Interchurch Aid of the denomination's Board of World Missions.

Contributions to the Easter offering, Mr. Freeland said, will be used for emergency relief, reconstruction and rehabilitation projects in Korea, Palestine and Europe and will make funds available for such ongoing programs of the church as providing material and spiritual aid to European churches, aiding orphaned missions, assisting Reformed theological seminaries in Europe and bringing exchange students to seminaries in the U. S.

"The Easter offering—made in our churches on the day on which we celebrate the resurrection of Jesus Christ and rejoice in the hope and faith that His great sacrifice makes possible to us—has particular pertinency and opportuneness," Mr. Freeland said.

"As we contribute out of our compassion and brotherly love for the homeless, friendless, orphaned and distressed, we remember one of the greatest injunctions of Him who contributed His life in His compassion for us:

TEXAN PARADE
By ROSS PHARES

EARLY TEXAS ENTERTAINMENT MAINLY HOME-MADE

Judging from the notoriety of Texas pranks one might easily believe that April Fools' Day was originated by Texans. At times the history of early Texas appears as a series of man-made gags with fate writing the continuity. In the grimmest moments men make jokes, and in the dullest and most lonely of places they put on comedy acts that no professional dramatist could equal.

Frontiersmen often went to considerable expense and time to play a trick. A greenhorn moved into a West Texas community, bought a herd of cattle and drove them to his ranch. A group of neighboring cowboys gathered around his corral, and began laughing at his cattle.

"What's the matter?" the newcomer demanded.

"I really hate to tell you," one of the boys said. "But you got a bunch of old run-down stock loaded off on you. Those cattle haven't got any front teeth in the upper jaw." The more the boys laughed the angrier the greenhorn became. But to help out, the boys agreed to help him drive the cattle back to the original owner to get his money back. Everybody involved lost about a day's work, but all considered the show worth the price—just to see the color of this tenderfoot's face when told that adult cattle ordinarily do not have front teeth in the upper jaw.

Even officers, on the serious business of facing death to preserve the peace, had to be able to take a joke. J. Evetts Haley, in his biography of Jeff Milton, tells this one about Milton in the tough town of Colorado City. Orders had been issued for all cowboys to check their guns upon arriving in town. One day as Jeff was passing a saloon, a patron came out stating that a riled man in there was saying "no d— Ranger was going to take a pistol off him." Then another customer came out and warned the Ranger. "Don't go in. A man in there says he'll kill anybody that tries to take his gun. And he's got his gang with him."

Jeff Milton was too brave and efficient a Ranger to ignore such a challenge. He stepped in, noted a man standing at the bar with his back to the door, with a conspicuous bulge in his coat, obviously made by the handle of a six-shooter. He was repeating: "I'd like to see the man that can take a pistol off me."

At that moment Milton, with his gun drawn, said: "I'll take it." And he did. But what he took was a sawed off plow handle. The house shook from the roar of laughter. And the Ranger bought the drinks for the crowd.

Jeff could dish them out as well as take them. But there was one firm, exacting Ranger, Adjutant General John B. Jones, who could not. And Jeff knew it—which was an unendurable challenge.

While fishing one day a rancher came along and asked Jeff where he got his fish hooks. He said he had been trying to buy some. "I bought them from the little Jew up there in the tent," Jeff said, pointed toward the adjutant general's headquarters. "But I warn you he's a hard man to deal with, and will stick you for a high price."

A few minutes later the rancher accosted the Ranger commander: "I came to buy some fish hooks, and you needn't be stingy with your prices."

"What do you mean," the adjutant general roared.

"Don't get in an uproar," the rancher said. "I'm prepared to pay your own high price."

From the rage of the little dark haired commander, it was obvious that he was no Jew peddler. "Who sent you here?" he thundered.

The cattleman, equal to the occasion, said: "A fellow down the road."

Jones, a strict disciplinarian, ordered a formal roll call. He asked the rancher to look the men over and tell him which one sent him.

A true Western sport of the old school, the rancher took, a long look, and said: "He ain't here. It was a fellow down the road on horseback."

Jones threatened to disband the company if necessary to find the joker if such a thing ever happened again.

When the company was dismissed, Jeff slipped off to thank the rancher in private. "I gave him pretty near all the hooks I had," Jeff related.

The frontiersmen started young. And their gags were not the Little Lord Fauntleroy type Shine Phillips, in "Big Spring" tells of a popular get-off of his day: Youngsters would load a muzzle-loading shotgun with slugs and sticks and get some uninitiated boy to crawl up on the dam of a waterhole and shoot at somebody's tame ducks. The writer pointed out that the boy shooting the gun got hurt a lot worse than the ducks. More fun still: "A 'dumb kid' might be convinced of the advantage of putting his shoulder against a post while firing the muzzleloader. No fatalities were reported, nor were there reports of any repeat performances.

In this modern day of radio, television, and movies, playing pranks is primarily a spectator's game. Conservative citizens rejoice over the change. But many of the old timers say there was more fun in the old days when entertainment was home-made.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Logan and Miss Laverne Dodson spent last weekend in Biloxi, Miss., where they visited A-C3 Alton Logan, who is stationed at Keisler Field, Miss.

Members of the Women's Society of Christian Service are making great fact-finding expedition into the heart of Africa. This Safari (African term for expedition) is taking place each Monday afternoon at First Methodist Church.

This "research expedition" coincides with the 50th anniversary of the Missionary Education movement.

Last year the combined Protestant groups of the United States and Canada co-operated in a program of assistance to African churches in a religious, educational and medical program, amounting to $4,669,831.

Are you interested in completing this Safari with us? If so, you are invited to attend next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. R. L. Batte Sr. is the leader and she will be assisted by other members.

VA Center Reports Need For Nurses

A need for nurses at the Veterans Administration Center was reported yesterday by Dr. L. M. Cochran, manager. The starting pay for junior grade nurses is $3740 per year; for the higher grades, initial pay is based on the applicant's education, training and past experience. Nurses work a five-day, 40-hour week; ample facilities are available on the hospital grounds for off duty recreation and relaxation. Modern living quarters and full subsistence will be furnished at a reasonable charge to all unencumbered nurses who desire them. All interested nurses under 40 years of age who hold currently effective registration certificates, or who will soon graduate from approved schools of nursing, are urged to apply for appointment by letter or in person to the personnel officer, Veterans Administration Center, Temple, Texas.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

(By Herman Yezak)
Mar. 23-27. A Constitutional Amendment proposing a four-year term for all precinct, county and district officials received a 93 to 41 favorable vote. The resolution needs 100 votes to send it to the Senate.

A motion in the House to instruct the Appropriations Committee to report within six days on the $600 annual pay raise bill for teachers failed to receive the necessary two-thirds vote.

The House returned the teacher certification bill to committee by a 64 to 46 vote.

Under the terms of a judicial redistricting bill the 85th Judicial District of Brazos and Robertson counties would be left unchanged. The 20th Judicial District of Milam county would be merged with Williamson county which is in a separate judicial district. Sub-committee hearings on the judicial redistricting bill will continue for about two weeks.

Passed in the Senate was a bill calling for a presidential preferential primary. The convention system of electing delegates would be abolished. The election would be held on the second Saturday in June on presidential election years.

The House refused to set for immediate consideration a bill to raise regular drivers license fees from one dollar to two dollars on a two-year license.

A bill to abolish school supervisors under the Gilmer-Akin laws was defeated in committee but the bill was revived and printed on minority report by a 70-67 vote in the House. Its outlook for passage is slim according to observers.

A Constitutional Amendment to let single persons have homestead exemptions was approved by a vote of 101 to 25. The exemption applies to homesteads value up to $3,000 which is the same as for married persons now. The measure was sent to the Senate.

County and district attorneys from all parts of the state were in Austin Tuesday, March 24 for conference with the Attorney General on law enforcement.

Sixty-four local and uncontested bills were passed in the House on Wednesday afternoon, March 25.

Approved by committee was a bill for justice of peace to conduct a small claims court in cases involving all debts of less than $50 and debts on salary or wages up to $100. Judgments entered against offenders could not be appealed beyond a county court. A standard form will be used in filing all such cases and court costs could not exceed $2 and it would be very unusual to secure legal services for such a small fee.

2415 Registered With Milam County Board Playlet To Be Given At First Baptist Sunday

Milam county has a total of 2415 Selective Service registrants, according to August G. Kunz, chairman of Milam County Local Board No. 92.

Mr. Kunz further says that there are 241 men in Milam county classified 1-A who have never been given their preinduction physical examination. Of course, he says, many of these are under 19 years of age and only men over 19 are being sent for physical at this time. Although men under 20 may be sent for induction, Milam county has not had to send any men under 20 for induction so far. Orders have been placed in the mail for the April induction and preinduction. Twenty will be examined April 23 and 24 will be inducted on April 21. All of the men to be inducted will be over 20 years of age.

There are now a total of 234 men in this county classified 1-C inducted. That means that they were inducted and are still serving in the armed forces. On the other hand, 240 are now classified 1-C enlisted. These are men who volunteered for service and are still on active duty.

Many men are being discharged now and upon discharge are required to report to the local board office, whether they are registered or not. Even though they are veterans, they are required to be registered and should do so immediately after discharge. Mr. Kunz says that without the information from the separation notice of a discharged registrant, the board cannot take reclassification action. Men now being discharged are eligible for 1-C discharge or 1-C reserve classifications and they may need their current classification notices to get new jobs or be reinstated in their old ones. A total of 157 men have been discharged since the beginning of the Korean conflict.

Conservation District News

Central Texas Soil

Central Texas SCD supervisors and other district cooperators are always eager to have farmers like "Buster" Griffin join them in carrying out the overall conservation plan of the district. "Buster" has started and is well on the way to finishing a complete and well coordinated soil and water conservation program that parallels the ideas of the district on land use and treatment in this area.

In 1948 "Buster" took over this 223 acre Blackland farm that had been farmed to the usual row crops for years. He immediately worked out a grazing program calculated to produce the greatest number of pounds of beef per acre and at the same time conserve soil and water and improve the fertility of the land.

The timbered bottom land pasture with its cover of Canada Wild Rye grass and other winter grasses and weeds fit into the rotation grazing program by furnishing green pasture and cover during the winter season. Three small fields are in Hubam clover and oats which are being utilized for grazing. Further up the slope on steep er land, a larger field is well established to Johnson grass which has been overseeded with Hubam clover which is cut for hay each year. The bottom land that is subject to frequent overflows is now in clovers and oats which were overseeded over this stand of bermuda. The plan is to increase the stand of bermuda to serve as the base grass to graze after the clovers mature. This year an area will be seeded to K. R. Bluestem which will furnish grazing during the critical months of July and August.

"Buster" now has his row crop acreage down to 50 acres with the balance being used to produce hay and pasture and rotated so that it fits into his flexible livestock program.

This farm is a good example of the land use changes that are giving more production, and more soil and water conservation with less effort than the old row crop system.
